More than two dozen new species of dinosaurs have been found in this national monument. Its designation in 1996 staved off coal mining from the region and helped scientists make extraordinary discoveries. Trump’s redrawing of the borders removes protections from more than 500 known paleontology sites.